While growing up in southwestern Minnesota, Nate LeBoutillier read any sports books he could get his hands. He now lives with his family in North Mankato, Minnesota. He began writing children's books in 2001 and has published many non-fiction titles. He also writes adult short fiction, novels, and screenplays. When not writing, Nate can be found playing with his kids, listening to music, or training for triathlons.

There's not much to this book. There aren't that many pages, no descriptions or graphics on actually playing the game, and just some simple explanations. I thought this would be much better with teaching my son the game, skills, and more pictures on basic plays.

I bought this book for my 11 year old son who is just getting interested in boy's league basketball. It is short and to-the-point, and written in a magazine format with much of the text attached to photos.

It gives lots of info on fundamentals that new players need to know. As a bonus, it is worth 0.5 AR points at my son's school.

Bought this for my 8 year old for Christmas. He enjoyed reading it at bedtime although I'm not sure how much of the tips/training he actually applied to his basketball game. He seems to do better at the electronic version.

Was for a MUCH younger age group than I thought. Way too baby-ish for my 14 year old.

The book is good for very young kids but has little to actually follow and do.

Great Book! my son loves reading this! He is 6 years old and it is an easy read for him.

Excellent, concise training information. This book shows how to improve your game using individual skills. Written for a 12+ year old.

this is good but the problem is it has only a few page
